DISASTER PREPAREDNESS

Response and Recovery:

Developing Your Company's Plans to Effectively

Survive a Flu Pandemic,

Natural Disaster or Terrorist Attack

Companies worldwide are reviewing and reevaluating their emergency preparedness, response and recovery plans. Hurricane Katrina was a wake-up call for companies that more planning needed to be done. Now, with the potential for a flu pandemic – the current threat is from the avian (bird) flu virus – companies need to prepare a NEW PLAN that specifically addresses pandemic influenza.

- Is your company prepared for the occurrence of a flu pandemic directly impacting the company and its operations?
- Will your company be able to maintain essential business operations?
- Will your company be able to provide a safe and secure workplace for its employees?
- What will your company do if upwards of half its workforce refuses or is unable to report to work for an extended period of time? How will your company respond?

DEAN R. SINGEWALD II, Epstein Becker & Green, P.C. (Stamford), will address:

- The laws and potential legal issues that should be considered in planning for a flu pandemic, natural disaster or terrorist attack.

- The key features of an emergency preparedness, response and recovery plan; the current threat posed by the avian flu virus; the unique characteristics of pandemic influenza that necessitate a separate plan; and the standard of pandemic influenza preparedness in the private sector.
