Management Issues

Your Workforce. Our Business.SM

From artificial intelligence and equal pay to social justice and remote/hybrid work, emerging technologies and social movements profoundly affect the workplace. At Epstein Becker Green, we focus on these changes every day, helping you manage workplace risks and protect your company's reputation, productivity, and bottom line.

The power of a super boutique

Our Employment, Labor & Workforce Management practice is one of the largest and most respected in the United States, advising domestic and global businesses of all sizes. We've handled every problem that can arise in the workplace, not just once or twice, but dozens of times. Our lawyers eat, breathe, and sleep workplace law, building a depth of knowledge and experience unheard of at other firms.

Solutions tailored to your business needs

Hospitals have different labor issues than hotels; tech employees expect different benefits than sales clerks. Because we've been in hundreds of workplaces, we know the language, culture, operations, and compensation structures of each industry, as well as the business goals that often drive employer-employee relationships. We can quickly pinpoint where problems may arise and resolve conflicts in and out of court.

Advice that's ahead of the curve

We draw on diverse experience in law, business, and government to help you see around corners and plan for the future. Our team includes former government officials who've helped shape and enforce labor and employment laws. As thought leaders in this space, we frequently share our knowledge with clients and friends through annual workforce management briefings, weekly video updates, labor and employment-focused blogs, and more.

Representing management at critical moments

California limits joint-employer liability

Won a joint-employer case involving our client, a temporary staffing company, which had assigned the plaintiff to a business that allegedly denied statutorily required meal periods. We persuaded the court that temporary staffing companies are not liable for the wage and hour violations committed by their clients.

Whistleblower defeated in arbitration

Convinced an AAA panel that a European insurer had not fired its former employee in retaliation for whistleblowing, in violation of the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act. After eight days of testimony, the panel dismissed the plaintiff's claim.

Law firm discrimination case dismissed

Won a summary judgment motion in federal district court in Brooklyn, New York, dismissing allegations of race discrimination, national origin discrimination, and retaliation against one of the world's top law firms.

Employee's breach-of-contract case defeated

Won a complete defense verdict in New York federal court when a former employee alleged multiple breach-of-contract theories against a financial services firm. Following a multi-week jury trial, the court awarded our client more than $1.6 million, which the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit upheld.

Teamsters stopped in their tracks

Defeated the Teamsters Union's attempt to establish a micro-unit at the California workplace of a large nonprofit agency. We counseled the client's leadership on the union representation election, revised the client's communications, and worked with supervisors to ensure maximum legal compliance and impact.

Comprehensive employee benefits counsel

Advised a diversified, multibillion-dollar multinational conglomerate on all aspects of employee benefits and executive compensation matters across its eight U.S. offices.
