RONALD M. GREEN is a Co-Founder of Epstein Becker & Green, P.C., and founder of its national Employment, Labor & Workforce Management practice. He is resident in the New York office. An accomplished trial attorney of international reputation, Mr. Green represents multinational and domestic companies in a range of industries, as well as a host of U.S. and foreign trade and business associations; defends corporate executives and sports and entertainment luminaries, particularly in sensitive and highly publicized litigation; and advises on a wide variety of labor and employment matters.

Mr. Green is one of the pioneers of the use of preemptive litigation in suing current and former employees, and others, who threaten to bring legal proceedings of an extortionate nature against the firm's clients. He also is an innovator in the use of the federal Declaratory Judgment Act to protect clients' business interests that may be at risk from disaffected employees.

Among the more than 100 cases that Mr. Green has tried to conclusion were a number of significant class actions, which are rarely tried and in which complex econometric models were used with great success. He often is sought by other law firms to lead their litigation teams in cases of unusual complexity.

One whistleblower, after being deposed for the defense by Mr. Green, admirably compared the verbal exchange to facing "a human sledgehammer ... I observed a master in action ... a fencing master." In 2013, Mr. Green obtained a defense verdict in a federal court employment discrimination litigation within eleven minutes of jury deliberation—and in 2016, he concluded a three-week trial in federal court with a successful jury verdict after 55 minutes of deliberation!

A member of EBG's Hispanic Business Group, Mr. Green's affiliations with the Hispanic community are both personal and professional. His maternal family hails from Buenos Aires and remains mostly in Argentina. He has represented a number of Hispanic-owned companies and has lectured frequently in Latin America, as well as in Europe and Asia, on conducting business in the United States. Mr. Green has traveled extensively throughout all of these regions.

Building on EBG's achievement in co-founding the International Lawyers Network, which now consists of more than 90 law firms on six continents, Mr. Green led the firm's Labor and Employment practice as it successfully trailblazed and continues to expand the use of global affiliations with law firms that are able to provide employment-related representation for multinational companies worldwide, including firms in Argentina, Brazil, and Mexico, as well as in China, Japan, and Korea, and throughout the European Union and the United Kingdom.

Prior to co-founding EBG, Mr. Green gained substantial prosecutorial and labor regulatory experience while working for the U.S. Department of Labor and seconded to the U.S. Department of Justice. As wage and hour trial counsel and as civil rights counsel for the Department of Labor's Office of Contract Compliance, and thereafter as head of the Civil Rights Division, he helped author many of the agency's regulations. Mr. Green also played integral roles in the litigation and settlement of a landmark telecommunications case and the Steel Industry Consent Decree.

Previously, Mr. Green served as a captain in the U.S. Army Judge Advocate General (JAG) Corps.

Since 1975, Mr. Green has taught courses in labor law and equal employment law and policy as a member of the adjunct faculty of the Cornell University School of Industrial and Labor Relations. He has been a consultant to the U.S. Secretary of Labor and the American Arbitration Association.

In addition to lecturing extensively throughout and outside the U.S., Mr. Green is a prolific author. He is a co-editor of the HR Banker Newsletter and has written and co-authored numerous articles for legal and business publications, including:
