The nation's fourth-largest metropolitan area, the Dallas-Fort Worth metroplex is also an emerging hub of the financial services sector. Many financial firms have established national or regional headquarters or other major operations there, and employment in finance jobs has continued to grow in recent years. The area also ranks highly for health care access due to recent rapid growth in the number of hospitals, outpatient clinics, and other health care organizations.

Organizations and individuals in financial services, health care, and other sectors count on the attorneys in our Dallas office to meet their employment law, health care law, and litigation needs in a changing, growing market.
