In recent years, Newark, New Jersey, the state's largest city, has become a major insurance center and home to numerous Fortune 500 companies in such diverse industries as financial services, health care, hospitality, retail, and technology.

Strategically located within minutes of New York City, and easily accessible to the nation's capital, the Newark office works closely with the firm's New York and Washington, DC, offices, as well as with our other offices across the country.

Our Newark attorneys represent Fortune 100 and other companies in the firm's core practice areas and across the industries we serve. Clients also rely on members of our Newark office for their extensive experience in ERISA and employee benefits, intellectual property, complex commercial litigation, corporate compliance, and federal and state environmental law. All of our Newark attorneys live in the region, and many are actively involved in local civic and philanthropic activities. Our attorneys' diverse, personal involvement in the community greatly adds to their understanding of the region's political and economic complexities and enhances their ability to anticipate and address specific client matters.
